

I remember that night like any other night - loud, grand, and... God, who knows? The best nights are usually forgotten, but lemme tell you this one's a doozy. Door slamming, angry cries, glasses thrown, the whole shebang. Yeesh, the Big Fella sure knows how to make an entrance, all right. And they ran, they ran as fast as their little feet could take. Nimble, but sure enough to dodge the bullets. It's hard to come about when he comes around.

But what now of this side of town's best kept secret? We can blame the loudmouths, sure. But we did our best to keep it under lock and key. The juice spilled over a little too much, and our best spirit was bamboozled, sold to the high heavens for a little bit of the greenery.

I tell you, loose lips make sinking ships and we got a taste of our own Titanic.

Keep it in the family, says Big Fella, his cigarette dangling from his lips. Didn't I tell you that the best secrets stay if they're from within?

And so it goes. The streets were hushed, whispers were filled with strange codes that changed each night. Crowds still gathered to welcome the new era. Somberly, somberly, they went as they chanted to keep it down, keep your voice down to pass on the message.

A takeover has begun over the little juice joint they called

HOUSE RULES

BREAK THE RULES AND WE BREAK YOU

Do not talk in a loud voice – speak easy.

Patience is a virtue. Quality cocktails take time.

Please wear appropriate glad rags.

No bootlegging. No gambling. No shouting. Fisticuffs will not be tolerated!

We cherish our glassware more than sex, please handle with utmost care.

Beer drinkers must not stay too far away from the toilet.

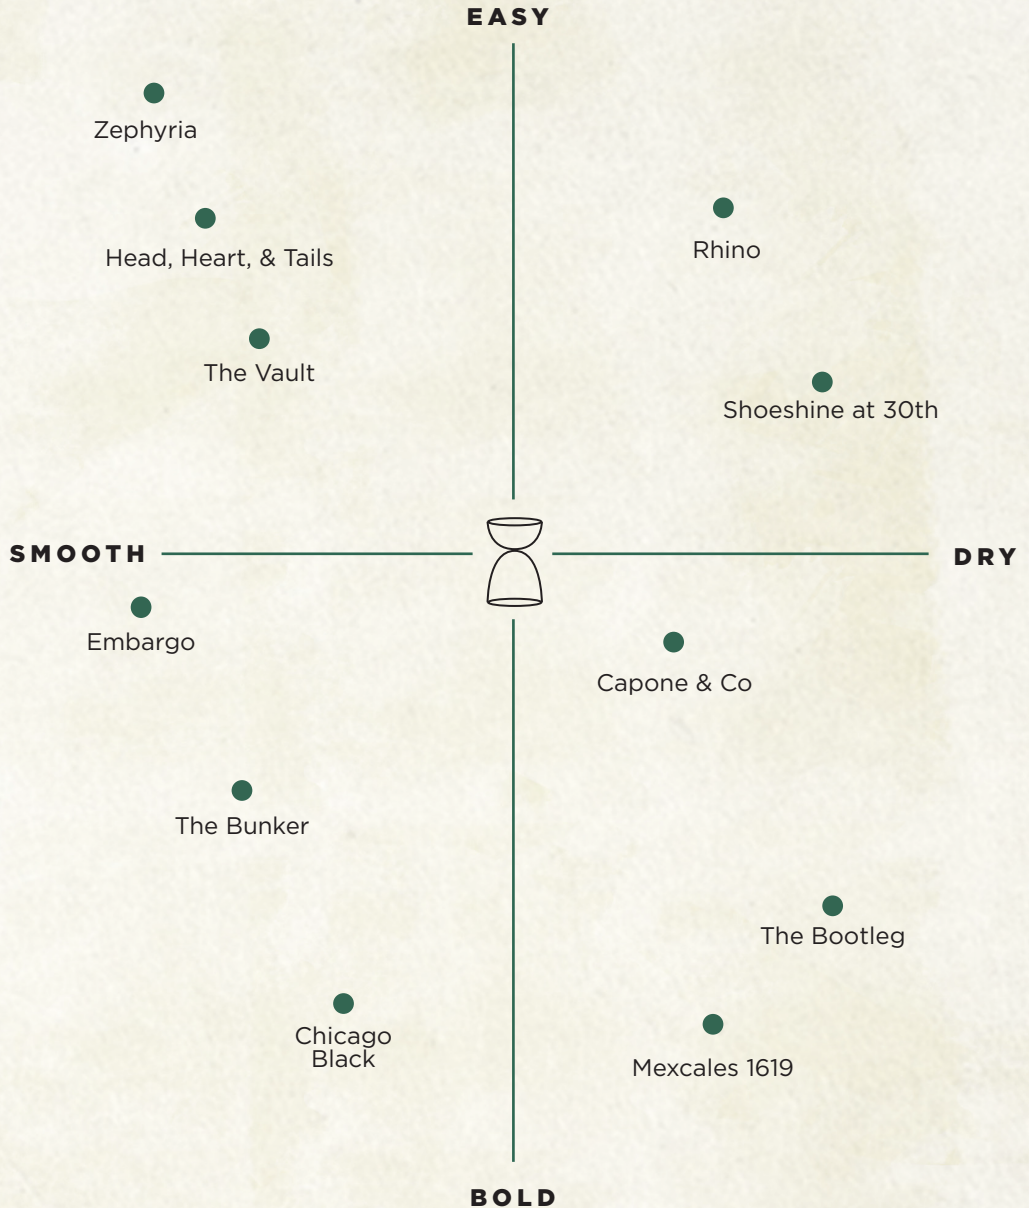

Please respect closing time, Vamps also need beauty sleep.
